Solar panels are being installed on the roof of the Whitney Applied Technology Center at Onondaga Community College.

Onondaga, NY -- Onondaga Community College has begun work to install solar panels on the roof of the Whitney Applied Technology Center.

The work will be done, weather permitting, from now until May 27.

The solar panels will provide the college with about 25,000 kilowatts hours of electricity, or about the equivalent of powering three to four homes, the college said.

The project coordinated by Warner Energy of Liverpool is linked to the college's sustainability- related curriculum in the architectural technology program. A real-time monitoring program will allow students to track the panels' performance.
